I spoke with Adam's mother today, against his wishes. He told me that he wanted to kill someone, under the orders of his "friend". He... he had a very meticulous plan for getting away with it. Honestly, Adam is starting to frighten me. He is a very sweet boy, but at times... something comes through the cracks. I wonder if he may be suffering from ASPD. However, he doesn't show the main symptoms, simply the emotionlessness. Though, this could be because he believes that he is being told to do these things. His mother dismissed it, saying that he simply plays too many video games or reads too many crime novels. I have called the police, just in case, but without actual evidence or an event to prove his possibly homicidal nature, they can do nothing.

Though, I wonder if he is actually capable of committing such an act.
